Judge: Terrance Armstard

Armstard works as a photojournalist at the El Dorado News-Times and continues to work as a part-time freelance photographer covering northeast Louisiana and southwest Arkansas. His work has been published in magazines such as Imagine Louisiana, Louisiana Life and KoreAm, a Korean American Life and magazine. He also is a speech teacher at South Arkansas Community College. Armstard currently resides in El Dorado. Born in Monroe, Louisiana, Terrance Armstard studied photography and journalism at the University of Louisiana at Monroe, acquiring his bachelor's degree in photojournalism and a master of arts degree in communication.

When asked about what he might be looking for in a winning piece, Armstard said, "An image might be pretty, but is it complex? I want to see the thought behind the work. I need to see what the photographer is thinking. I'm really most interested in the complexity of the photo... not complexity, as in a busy photo, but a photo with complex thinking behind it. Is there something in the photo that causes me to think? That's what I'm interested in seeing."

TO ENTER: Submit up to two framed photographs along with a completed entry form and the entry fee for each piece.
